DECREE FOR BASSETT

Justice Gould Decides Divorce Case in His Favor.

REV. MR. HUNT TO PAY $750

Justice Finds Charges of Improper Conduct on Part of Fanny Rice Basset Fairly Inferred—No Reference to Children, Who Are Out of the Court's Jurisdiction.

Charles C. Bassett, of the Geological Survey, was yesterday granted an absolute divorce by Justice Gould from Fanny Rice Bassett, on the ground of infidelity. Mr. Bassett had named the Rev. E. Lawrence Hunt as co-respondent, and in his opinion Justice Gould declared that improper relations are fairly inferred from the acts and conduct of the defendant, as shown in the testimony.

Justice Gould's decision concluded with the announcement that he would sign a decree for plaintiff with costs. The decree, it is supposed, will be signed today and its costs, which will be assessed against Hunt, will approximate $750. The decree will contain no reference to the Bassett children, as they are beyond the court's jurisdiction, being with their mother in Omaha.

Was Social Favorite.

The decision announced yesterday brings to a close one of the most interesting divorce cases in recent years. Mrs. Fanny Rice Bassett, the defendant, daughter of former Senator Rice, of Arkansas, was reared in the most exclusive circles of Little Rock. Her girlhood was spent mostly behind convent and seminary walls. After a social season at Washington, where her father was serving a term in the Senate, she met, and married, Charles C. Bassett, the plaintiff, then a clerk in the Geological Survey.

Mrs. Bassett's social position in Washington won for her the distinction of being called the "Chaperon of the House of Representatives." Her teas and "at homes" were largely attended, both by Senators and Representatives. Her acquaintance in the diplomatic corps was extensive.

Rev. Mr. Hunt Asked to Resign.

Rev. Dr. E. Lawrence Hunt, named as co-respondent in the proceedings, an assistant pastor of the church which Mrs. Bassett attended, it is said, urged her to use her influence for him that he might be appointed chaplain of the Senate. Mrs. Bassett entered so earnestly into the campaign that the gossip soon got busy. Pressure was brought to bear upon Dr. Hunt by members of his church, and his resignation was asked.

It was brought out in the testimony that while Mr. Bassett was away from Washington, Hunt and Mrs. Bassett took trips to Atlantic City, New York, Baltimore, and other places.

Proceedings were brought in this city by Mr. Bassett for an absolute divorce, he alleging infidelity and desertion. Mrs. Bassett, who went to Omaha, Neb., soon after, filed a counter suit there on the ground of cruelty.

The testimony in the case here was taken by deposition, and not one witness was called to the stand in open court.

Attorneys Edward T. Colladay, Crowl M. Fulton, and Harry F. Lerch represented Bassett.

DEATH LIST INCREASED.

Number Far Exceeds That of Last Week in District.

The report of the Health Department submitted to the Commissioners yesterday shows that the total number of deaths reported during the last week far exceeds the record of the previous week, and also the same week of last year, there being 156 as compared with 118 during the previous week, and the same number during the previous week of last year.

This increase is noticed in the number of deaths from the following diseases: Consumption, 24, as compared with 7 the previous week, and 19 during same period of last year; Diphtheria, 11 against 11 the previous week, and 10 the same period in 1906; Kidney diseases, 14 against 3 the previous week, and 10 during the same period last year. A slight decrease is noticed in deaths from pneumonia, malignant growths, and grip.

The typhoid fever record shows 71 cases under treatment at the close of the report period, which number is 4 less than the previous week, and there being 6 new cases reported, and 10 discharged. During the week just past there was 1 death from this disease. No outbreaks of smallpox were reported, the District still being free from this disease.

There were 126 births reported, 76 of them being white and 50 colored.

FOUNDING TO GET HOME.

People with Whom Boy Was Left Will Adopt Him.

Andrew B. Madison and Daisy Madison yesterday petitioned the District Supreme Court to pass an order permitting them to adopt as their own child and heir-at-law a boy, one year old, who was left with them by a young woman in October last, but who never claimed him.

The petitioners declare they were married in this city June 23, 1903, and that they reside at 1917 Euclid street northwest, and that on October 13 last a boy, born on February 12, 1906, was left at their home by a young woman whose name and address is unknown to them, and who stated she would return the next day.

The petitioners declare that no one has appeared to claim the child since, and that they have learned upon investigation that the name given by the woman leaving the child, Adelaide Reed, and the address, Rosslyn, Va., were fictitious.

Admission will be free.

Hearing on Anti-Tipping Bill.

Waiters as well as guests and patrons of the hotels and restaurants will have an opportunity of expressing their views on the bill prohibiting tipping in the District of Columbia at a hearing before the Commissioners Saturday at 11 o'clock.

QUESTIONS MARKET RENTAL.

W. J. Morris Points Out Apparent Lack of Good Management.

Editor The Washington Herald:
Along in the spring of 1906 the undersigned wrote the Board of Commissioners of the District, raising the question as to the inadequacy of the rental paid by the Washington Market Company for the use of the ground occupied by the Center Market buildings.

Under date of July 10, 1906, they replied, stating that they had submitted the question to the corporation counsel, who reported that in his opinion the question of rental was res judicata, and referring to the decision in the case of District of Columbia vs. Market Company, 108 U. S. 243.

Under date of July 14, 1906, I replied, expressing concurrence in the view that the matter was res judicata so far as concerned the amount of rental to be paid by the company. I suggested, however, that my object in calling the matter up was not with the view of having the question increased, but to have the question of the taking over of the buildings for the people considered. I expressed the opinion that a very improvident contract had been made originally with this corporation; that it is now paying the net sum of less than $10,000 per annum for the occupancy of 106,722 square feet of ground, which is worth, in the opinion of real estate men, not less than $150,000.

By the terms of the act chartering the company we can now, at any time, take over the property by paying the appraised value of the buildings—I should say not over $200,000.

Why is not this matter a proper one for the Board of Commissioners to inquire into upon their own initiative? Why should they not investigate as to the gross and net income of this corporation, so as to be able to advise Congress whether it would be a profitable operation to exercise the option we have?

In my opinion, the net income of the corporation is not less than $75,000. I believe the price to the people from the taking over of the property, in the sixty-one years the contract has yet to run, would exceed $1,500,000.

Or, what might be better still, the rents of the stalls could be reduced, so that the dealers would not have their present excuse for high prices.

Of one thing I am certain, it is a wretched bad management for the District of Columbia to pay, as it does, $8,000 per annum rental for the use of a portion of the second-story of the market building for the use of the militia, while the company pays no more than $7,500 rental for the whole ground.

PHASES OF GAS PROBLEM.

Has the Company a Legal Right to Exact Deposit?

Editor The Washington Herald:
We are having a great deal of agitation in regard to the price of gas and the treatment the Washington public receives at the hands of the gas company, and as your writers include both lawyers and statesmen, perhaps some of them can answer these questions: Has the Washington Gaslight Company the legal right to refuse, unless the prospective consumer deposits in cash any amount demanded to turn on the flow of gas, for the manufacture of which the company is chartered and for the supply of which to the public it is under obligations? Why should the public be forced to supply the funds to carry on the gas or any other business which is conducted by a corporation? Again, has this company the right to demand to change the legal price of gas, after having received such deposit, if the consumer, on account of sickness, death, absence from the city, plain forgetfulness or any other cause, fails to pay his bill without question on the day on which the company sees fit to demand it? I say, if all the above is legal, it looks to me like class legislation, which is not constitutional. However, am sure there is not a reader of your valuable paper in this city who would not be glad to get more light (legal) on the above subject.

A. BUCHANAN.

France and the Church.

Editor The Washington Herald:
In your issue of the 12th instant, I read an article entitled "Beveridge Scores Policy of France." I read so much as was published in your report of that speech, but failed to find in so much of the same as appeared under that caption the scoring.

What has France done to prevent "absolute liberty?" The Senator quotes the reported sayings of one or two individuals to show that among the legislators of France there are some atheists; but should he hold the French government responsible for the disbelief and imprudence of a few individuals? May there not be some just disbelievers in any legislature? The laws recently enacted by France are all made with the view of bringing about this "absolute liberty," which the Senator so highly extols, and the best proof of it is, that of all the various religious denominations in France, there is only one that complains of the laws.

The Roman Catholic churches of France are all open for the practice of religious worship on the sole condition that the clergy will comply with the civil law of the country, and I am quite certain that the Catholic faith of the United States, so far from being in jeopardy, understand the French situation are satisfied with it and that they all believe in the separation of church and state. The religion of Jesus Christ cannot be destroyed or even injured by legislation; if it could, it would have perished a thousand years ago. But I most emphatically

COLLEGE DEAL NOT CLOSED

George Washington University Considering Trade for New Site.

Plan is Afoot to Buy the Dean Property and Sell the Van Ness Estate Holdings.

President Charles W. Needham, of the George Washington University, stated yesterday afternoon that he could not confirm or deny the story that the university trustees had purchased the Dean property, at the head of Connecticut avenue, as a new site for the institution's buildings. President Needham said certain negotiations were in progress which had not yet been completed, and that the rumor that the corporation would buy the Dean property and sell its holdings in the Van Ness estate was not yet a fact.

According to the story circulated yesterday among real estate men, the university trustees had decided upon the purchase of nine and one-half acres of ground on the hill above Florida avenue, on the line of Connecticut avenue, known as the Dean property. The story further related that the corporation had secured options on the ground and would erect the university buildings on this lot, which is high and commanding in location, and would make a much better site for a university than the Van Ness property on Seventeenth street, which the institution now owns.

Coupled with the story of the purchase of the Dean property was another that a purchaser stood ready to buy the Van Ness property, at a good price, thus relieving the university of its holdings there and affording a fund with which to buy the new property. It was further stated that the price to be paid for the Dean property was $200,000.

It is stated that the general plan of buildings designed for Van Ness Park could be carried out with far better effect on the new site, to which would be added sanitary advantages of no mean order.

M. A. Leves, optician, at 614 Ninth street northwest, is preparing to make extensive repairs and additions to his place of business. The building, which is an old brick structure, will be remodeled. The front will be taken down and large plate glass windows will be put in. The interior will be considerably changed so as to make more room for the shop connected with the business, as well as to give a better arranged space for the store in front. The builder is J. Morris Baden, and the work will be started in about two weeks.

Property adjoining the Emergency Hospital, fronting on D street northwest, has been sold at auction to Washington National Bank at $4 square foot. The property is improved by three frame houses of old design.

CIVIC CENTER TO MEET.

Interesting Programme of Reports on District Affairs to Be Heard.

An interesting programme of reports on District affairs has been prepared for the annual public meeting of the Civic Center to be held this evening at the Public Library.

Jackson H. Ralston, who several years ago prepared an exhaustive report for the Board of Trade on the cost of gas, will discuss the relation of the city of Washington to its public service corporations. He will doubtless have some opinions to express as to whether the price of gas can be reduced, and what ought to be done with the street railways.

At the last meeting of the council of the Civic Center the corresponding secretary was instructed to communicate with all the leading dry goods merchants in Washington in order to ascertain the extent to which goods bearing the label of the National Consumers' League are kept on sale in this city, it being the desire of the members to purchase these goods if possible. The results of this inquiry will be reported at the public meeting by Dr. Henry J. Harris, chairman of the industrial department. As there is no local consumers' league in Washington, the Civic Center has to this extent undertaken the functions performed by such organizations in other cities.

Commissioner Macfarland will address the meeting.

Dr. George M. Kober will present the report of the Public Health Department on the present status of the water and milk supplies of the city of Washington.

MORE INSPECTORS NEEDED.

Commissioners Want Enough to Cover All Food Establishments.

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Hays Discusses Inspection Report. Occasional Shaking Up Needed.

Commissioner Macfarland said yesterday that it has not been determined what action will be taken as the result of the report of Health Officer W. C. Woodward concerning the inefficiency of the inspection force of the health department. The entire matter has been referred by Dr. Woodward to the Commissioners for their consideration.

In their annual estimates the Commissioners asked for an increase of eight inspectors in the health department, there being only one to cover all the food establishments in the District of Columbia.

In reference to this, Dr. Woodward said: "Speaking generally, each food inspector has under his supervision 20 square miles of territory, containing for inspection 47 stores and about the same number of occupied market stalls, scattered along 113 miles of highway. It is evident, therefore, that very frequent inspections of goods and sanitary conditions are impossible. The service is, at best, only deterrent in its influences.

"As a matter of fact, the records of the department show that the average visits to markets each week is forty-five, and the average visits to stores 47. In practice the entire District of Columbia is divided into routes, each of which is assigned to a given route each day, being furnished with a list of stores and other places to be inspected.

"New stores and other places are added to those lists as soon as they come to the knowledge of the health department. Each inspector is required to submit on the morning following his inspection a report showing the results of it. By this method no establishment is under the supervision of one inspector, but as the route cards are given some to one and some to another, any one of the three inspectors is likely to visit any establishment any day."

That there should be more inspectors employed only in the health department, and that these men should be more strict in their enforcement of the law with regard to the condition of meats and vegetables, is the opinion of Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Hays, who is inspector of the health department, and who is also a member of the health committee of the Senate.

"These inspectors become accustomed to the poor condition in which edibles are kept by the retailers, and frequently, without doing it intentionally, pass food of doubtful quality on to the consumer. If they hadn't seen so much of this stuff," Dr. Hays said yesterday, "Consequently, it is found necessary to give them men shaking up occasionally."
